

Table of Contents

Issue topic: Nuclear risks and long-term peacekeeping (Part I)
Editorial	3
Articles
Preventing a nuclear escalation in the Ukraine conflict by Ayesha Zafar	4
Sustainable nuclear non-proliferation. Case study: Iran by Tom Sauer	14
Framing the Bomb: media representations, public perceptions and the future of nuclear weapons in the United Kingdom by Rhys Crilley	20
Book Reviews
Marianne Takle (2024): Showing social solidarity with future generations	28
Greg Bognar / Axel Gosseries (eds.) (2023): Ageing without ageism? Conceptual puzzles and policy proposals	30
Imprint	32

Editors of the IGJR

Chief Editor

Jörg Tremmel holds two PhDs, one in philosophy and one in social sciences, and he is an Extraordinary Professor at Eberhard Karls University of Tübingen. From 2010 to 2016, Tremmel was the incumbent of a Junior Professorship for Intergenerationally Just Policies at the same university. Before, he was a research fellow at the London School of Economics and Political Science, both at its Centre for Philosophy of Natural and Social Science and (part-time) at the Grantham Institute for Climate Change Research. Tremmel's research interests lie mainly in political theory/political philosophy. In several papers, Tremmel proposed a "future branch" in democracies in order to represent the interests of future citizens in the legislative process. His most salient book is A Theory of Intergenerational Justice (2009).

Co-Editor

Grace Clover completed her studies in History and Modern Languages (German) at the University of Oxford in 2024, where she focused on the history of social movements, families, and gender. She is now on the board at the Foundation for the Rights of Future Generations, where she focuses on theories of long-term thinking and intergenerational justice, and paradigm shifts in our approach to the natural world. She has published several book reviews in the IGJR on these themes.

The peer-reviewed journal Intergenerational Justice Review (IGJR) aims to improve our understanding of intergenerational justice and sustainable development through pure and applied research. The IGJR (ISSN 2190-6335) is an open-access journal that is published on a professional level with an extensive international readership. The editorial board comprises over 50 international experts from ten countries, representing eight disciplines. Published contributions do not reflect the opinions of the Foundation for the Rights of Future Generations (FRFG) or the Intergenerational Foundation (IF). Citations from articles are permitted upon accurate quotation and submission of one sample of the incorporated citation to FRFG or IF. All other rights are reserved.