

Table of Contents

Issue topic:

Generation Corona: The current and future impact of the COVID-19 pandemic on the young generation

Editorial 39

“Corona Class of 2020”: a lost generation?

by Clara Albrecht, Vera Freundl, Lavinia Kinne and Tanja Stitteneder

40

Youth and COVID-19: long-lasting scars ahead?

by Miriam Allam, Moritz Ader and Gamze Igriglu

46

Book Reviews

Dieter Dohmen and Klaus Hurrelmann (eds.) (2021):
Generation Corona? Wie Jugendliche durch die
Pandemie benachteiligt werden

56

Steven Taylor (2020): The Psychology of Pandemics:
Preparing for the Next Global Outbreak of Infectious Disease

59

Conference Report

Berlin Demography Days 2022:
“Youth in Demographic Change” (16-18 May 2022)
by Anne Bierwirth, Noah Croitoru, Milena Kulsheimer

61

Imprint

63

Editors of the IGJR

Chief Editor

Jörg Tremmel holds two PhDs, one in philosophy and one in social sciences, and he is an Extraordinary Professor at Eberhard Karls University of Tübingen. From 2010 to 2016, Tremmel was the incumbent of a Junior Professorship for Intergenerationally Just Policies at the same university. Before, he was a research fellow at the London School of Economics and Political Science, both at its Centre for Philosophy of Natural and Social Science and (part-time) at the Grantham Institute for Climate Change Research. Tremmel’s research interests lie mainly in political theory/political philosophy. In several papers, Tremmel proposed a “future branch” in democracies in order to represent the interests of future citizens in the legislative process. His most salient book is A Theory of Intergenerational Justice (2009).

Book Review Editor

Markus Rutsche holds a PhD in International Affairs and Political Economy from University of St. Gallen (HSG). He is a research consultant at University of Applied Sciences – Public Administration and Finance Ludwigsburg. A political scientist by training, he considers himself a life-long student of philosophy and political theory; and he is particularly interested in the works of John Rawls, Jürgen Habermas, Charles Taylor and Alasdair MacIntyre. His doctoral thesis, entitled John Rawls and the Problem of Democratic Stability (in German) was an extensive study in the theory and practice of political liberalism.

Co-Editor

Noah Croitoru obtained a bachelor’s degree in political science from the University of Regensburg. In his bachelor thesis, he compared the actions of the UN Security Council in the civil wars in Libya and Syria. He currently studies democracy science for his master’s degree at the University of Regensburg with a special focus on international relations and security policy and worked as an intern at the Foundation for the Rights of Future Generations (FRFG).

Co-Editor

William Clark is in his sixth and final semester of his bachelor’s degree in Politics, Philosophy and Economics at Karlshochschule International University. He is currently writing his bachelor thesis where he will analyse German foreign policy, with a focus on the historical context, in relation to the Russia-Ukraine war. He worked as an intern at the Foundation for the Rights of Future Generations (FRFG).

---

The peer-reviewed journal Intergenerational Justice Review (IGJR) aims to improve our understanding of intergenerational justice and sustainable development through pure and applied research. The IGJR (ISSN 2190-6335) is an open-access journal that is published on a professional level with an extensive international readership. The editorial board comprises over 50 international experts from ten countries, representing eight disciplines. Published contributions do not reflect the opinions of the Foundation for the Rights of Future Generations (FRFG) or the Intergenerational Foundation (IF). Citations from articles are permitted upon accurate quotation and submission of one sample of the incorporated citation to FRFG or IF. All other rights are reserved.